"...It shows good concentration and very notable depth of flavor, but without any of the heaviness that can mark some wines grown at lower elevations in the Garnacha-intensive appellations of Aragón. On the contrary, this vintage (like many before it) shows a Pinot-like softness with more flavor than seems possible based on its rather modest physical weight. The red and black fruit flavors have an open, easy character to them without seeming at all overtly fruity — much less "grapey." Enduringly enjoyable to drink and highly versatile with food, this can also be sipped on its own with great pleasure. ..."
