Reviews:

“With a fresh nose of grapefruit, lemon and just-mowed grass, this wine dances on the tongue with flavors of toasted pineapple, white peach and white flowers. There is a touch of talc on the finish.”

“Sotomonte’s 2021 Verdejo is a very, very good example and at the present time, shows no ill effects on the nose from its choice of closure. The bouquet is bright and beautifully expressive, hopping from the glass in a mix of gooseberry, lime peel, wild fennel, salty soil tones, a touch of green olive and plenty of fresh-cut grass in the upper register. On the palate the wine is full-bodied and complex, but already egregiously pinched by the reduction brought on by the screwcap; with vigorous swirling, it unlocks a fair bit. The wine is long, crisp and well balanced, and under cork, I am sure it would be terrific. Under screwcap, it is not bad once the reduction has been unlocked as much as it can be, but this is a perfect example of a wine that would be great under an agglomerated cork, but which is partially compromised by its screwcap, with reductive constriction on the palate and a bit of reductive vegetable elements on the finish. 2022-2025.”
