"...Maturana is a rarity, but the fruit behind this has a long pedigree, sourced from a single plot of vines ("Los Cuartos") planted in 1947. Medium-bodied, it is marked by very bright acidity but does not come off as tart, with open and juicy fruit flavors easily balancing out both the acidity that arrives early and the tannins that check in late. Subtle floral aromas get this off to a great start, and the fruit flavors seem to me as much "blue" in tone as red or black, though shades of all three are evident..."
